

September 26, 2008

Dr. Leslie P. Hume
235 Locust Street
San Francisco, CA 94118

Dear Dr. Hume:

ROTC and national service have been much in the news, thanks to recent statements from both presidential candidates at Columbia University. In the wake of substantial public attention to these topics and widespread acknowledgment of the important role of such service, the American Council of Trustees and Alumni asks you and your fellow board members to reconsider the standing of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps program on Stanford's campus.

As you are undoubtedly aware, Stanford is one of a handful of institutions that have, for some decades, forbidden ROTC to conduct its programs on campus. As a consequence, students at Stanford who wish to explore a career in the military—or to benefit from the substantial scholarships offered by ROTC—are forced to participate in programs elsewhere, often at considerable inconvenience and personal sacrifice. Senators Obama and McCain, as well as the editorial boards of the Washington Post and Wall Street Journal, agree that students should have the same opportunity to explore military careers as they do any other career path, and ROTC is an indispensable part of that opportunity.

In the words of Sen. Obama, “The notion that young people...in any university, aren't offered the choice, the option of participating in military service, I think is a mistake.” Now is the time to correct that mistake.

In the past, trustees have demurred on this topic, suggesting that this decision belongs to faculty or administrators. That is not the case. As a trustee, you are ultimately responsible for ensuring the well-being of your institution and the basic welfare and rights of students. We urge you, in this spirit, to take up the issue of ROTC on campus, and to address it as a board.

As a trustee, you have a singular opportunity to advance students' rights to make their own decisions about whether to participate in ROTC, as well as whether to support or oppose the “Don't ask, don't tell” policy imposed on the military by Congress. At a time when there is broad support for public service, continued refusal to permit students to perform military service on campus—service that helps preserve the cherished freedoms that all members of the campus community enjoy—seems neither fair nor wise.

PROMOTING ACADEMIC FREEDOM AND EXCELLENCE

1726 M Street, NW, Suite 802 Washington, DC 20036
T (202) 467-6787; (888) ALUMNI-8 F (202) 467-6784 info@goacta.org www.goacta.org

September 26, 2008

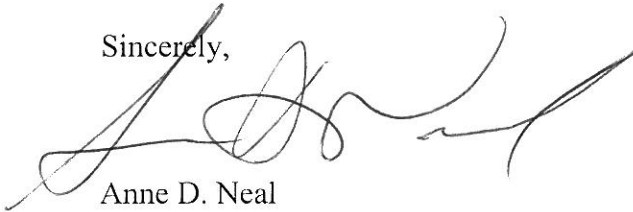

Page Two

At the same time, the relative dearth of graduates of elite universities in the military means institutions like Stanford lack what former Clinton administration official Kathy Roth-Douquet has called “a moral connection to those Americans we send into harm’s way.” When there is a disconnect between those making important military decisions and those charged with carrying them out, America’s ideal of self-government is undermined.

ACTA is a non-profit, non-partisan educational organization with a network of more than 5,000 college and university trustees around the country. We thank you for your service to American higher education and would welcome the opportunity to discuss ROTC on campus with you. We look forward to hearing from you on how you will address this critical issue.

Warm best wishes.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Anne D. Neal', written in a cursive style.

Anne D. Neal
President

cc: William M. Barnum, Jr., trustee, Stanford University
Robert M. Bass, trustee, Stanford University
Mariann Byerwalter, trustee, Stanford University
James E. Canales, trustee, Stanford University
James G. Coulter, trustee, Stanford University
Mary B. Cranston, trustee, Stanford University
Lauren B. Dachs, trustee, Stanford University
Steven A. Denning, trustee, Stanford University
Bruce W. Dunlevie, trustee, Stanford University
Ying-Ying Goh, trustee, Stanford University
John A. Gunn, trustee, Stanford University
Pete Higgins, trustee, Stanford University
Ann H. Lamont, trustee, Stanford University
John P. Levin, trustee, Stanford University
Goodwin Liu, trustee, Stanford University
Hamid R. Moghadam, trustee, Stanford University
Wendy Munger, trustee, Stanford University
Ellen Ochoa, trustee, Stanford University
Miriam Rivera, trustee, Stanford University
Richard A. Sapp, trustee, Stanford University
Philip G. Satre, trustee, Stanford University

September 26, 2008

Page Three

John H. Scully, trustee, Stanford University
Isaac Stein, trustee, Stanford University
Thomas F. Steyer, trustee, Stanford University
Ross H. Walker, trustee, Stanford University
W. Richard West, trustee, Stanford University
Vaughn C. Williams, trustee, Stanford University
Jerry Yang, trustee, Stanford University
John L. Hennessy, president, Stanford University